

COVID Safe Check-in guide

For your business

COVID Safe check-in using the NSW Government QR Code is an easy, and contactless way to help keep our community safe. Customer check-in information is captured securely and can be accessed by NSW Health directly and immediately if needed for contact tracing. This means your business isn't responsible for keeping customer records - the information is recorded by the NSW Government as soon as a customer checks in. Please refer to nsw.gov.au for the latest customer record keeping requirements by industry.

Using the NSW Government QR code within your business

Once your business is registered as COVID Safe, you will be emailed a unique QR code.

- 1 Download and display your unique NSW Government QR Code poster where it's easy for customers to see and scan. You must not alter the poster in any way.
- 2 Prompt customers to scan the code when they enter your business and confirm the customer has successfully checked in (look for the green tick on the confirmation screen).

How customers can check in

There are 3 different ways for customers to check into your business

Frequently Asked Questions

What do I do if my internet goes down?

It is important that customer contact details are still collected digitally. You will need to manually collect your customer's contact details, then electronically record the details within 12 hours. The manually collected forms should be destroyed immediately after being recorded electronically, and digital records kept for 28 days.

What do I do if the Service NSW app does not work?

If the Service NSW app is not available, customers can continue to check-in using the Check-in webform. Staff can also collect customer details using the Service NSW business online form.
